PRINCAR T. BARNUM.

The great showman is dead. It may be ed whether Mr. BARNUM over exhibited anything to the world more worthy its attention than himself. That he left several millions at his death is not haif as important as the example of his life, which is everything that is encouraging. He started poor, the son of a Connecticut His career from start to finish was struggle with fortune he came out ahead. Mr. BARNUM has been almost everything, but his talents were particularly suited to the show business. With stanch integrity, he joined a genius for advertising and great facility in pleasantly boodwinking the iblic. He has enjoyed a full life, one with schievement in it. Honors, wealth, domestic joys, a constitution which weathered over fourscore years, and a name which is known all over the world, are good measure in life results, and these have been the lot of PHINEAS T. BARNUM.

Such a career is strong encouragement to every American boy, for no one ever represented better certain distinctive phases of the American character than the founder of The Greatest Show on Earth. He was humane, energetic, inventive, and the world has been the better for his presence

The new grab for Battery Park should et the fate of its predecessor. Its object is to increase the value of real estate in that section of Westchester County through which the New York and Northern Railroad runs.
